

VOICES OF THE UNDERINSURED

Phil Cutting, 56, Dairy Farmer Guilford, Vermont

They say farming's one of the most dangerous jobs.
Get kicked by cow; break a leg.
You gotta be smarter than the machines,
the baler, mower, corn chopper.
Being a farmer, you don't have to worry about robbers.
No one's going to come after your money....

Each month I pay $393 for insurance: comes right out of my milk check, every two weeks, a pretty good chunk... Last winter I was having chest pains. Went to the doctor. She had me do a stress test; ran me through a machine that took pictures of my heart. Said it was probably gas. After that ordeal I still ended up owing about $2000.

All farmers really want is to pay their bills and make a living. Politicians talk about doing something with health care, but the insurance companies and pharmaceutical lobbies are so strong, the will just isn't there.

Every Vermonter deserves affordable health care provide it for Phil? For you?
